Bavarian Dances Burghausen Region 6 May 1977

Polka: Regardless of the tempo of the polka music, the polka substitutes a dip, with the foot which will make the next step barely brushing the floor, where we are used to a hop. This is a very relaxing step, it can be danced all night with little effort and it is easy to perform (and is very practical) in a crowded party room. It is worth practicing:

Music and Protocol: Burghausen's have a delightful protocol: The trickier parts of a dance are displayed by a Leader Couple to a substantial portion of the music. The polka, waltz or pivot which are usually the final phases are left off. Thus, most of the music which accompanies these dances includes this quite long introduction so that it is rather more suitable for parties than for recreational dancing or exhibitions.

Position: For turning during waltz, polka or schottische the Ballroom (open floor) or shoulder-waist (crowded floor) are optional positions.

8 SAUTANZ (Mixer)

- A Couples promenade CW (M R hand around W waist)
 B Women walk outside M circle CW and choose Man, while Men either in twos or threes (there are to be no odd men out) turn to one another and hit each other's hands hard enough to support one another while they back away .5 meter.
 C Waltz with the woman.

9 Stossts am Kopf am (mixer) Use small steps

- A 1 M and new partner bow Outside, ^{Outside} Inside, Outside, bow
 A 2 Couples turn away and bow apart touching bottoms: I, O, I.
 A 3-8 Repeat A1-2. Cpls may subtly rotate about a central pt.
 B Polka Waltz

10 STERNPOLKA Like Doublebska Polka except that women are not thrown into the center, they can choose a man and wait and the Mens Clap: Thighs twice, together, next men, together twice, etc.
